

1.3.1 Crosscutting issues relevant to Professional Ethics, Gender, Human Values, Environment and Sustainability into the Curriculum

An Overview

AMET has the vision of empower learners with wholesome knowledge through progressive innovation in training, research and development which will render students a unique learning experience and a transformation impact on the Global Society. The curricula of the different Programmes offered at AMET are adequately integrated with crosscutting issues such as Professional Ethics which improves the character of the students in the learning and working environment. Gender related course provides how to behave with other genders with respect and dignity. Human Values provides knowledge about social and ethical responsibility, Environment & Sustainability provides environmental awareness and learn how to protect it. In the outcome-based education curriculum almost all the degree Programmes have courses relevant to above category.
